

We were surprised when Ted's happy expression turned into a dolorous one.

The dictator lied when he claimed he favored suffrage for women.

Sylvia's odious remarks caused the audience to turn against her.

With remarkable talent, the reporter was able to quote speeches verbatim.

Yearning to be a thespian, Roger took lessons from a drama coach.

The defense lawyer admitted that his client was a pathological liar.

In history class, we studied the grandeur of Greece and the glory of Rome.

The impasse was broken when the union agreed to management's offer.

When her boss denigrated Martha's stenographic ability, she quit.

The blow to the boxer's jaw turned out to be a mortal one.

The prison guards inflicted torture on some of the inmates.

Using guile, the magician pulled the wool over the spectators' eyes.

Aunt Ethel's morning regimen called the three cups of coffee.

The team captain's polemic led to a fistfight in the locker room.

Hal was surprisingly articulate for a high school freshman.

When he lost control of the militia, the despot was forced to flee.

In her reverie, Ellen saw herself as the next U.S. President.

Claiming to be prescient, the fortune-teller took advantage of the gullible woman.

The members of the revolutionary cabal were arrested and jailed.

Enervated by his long walk, Jose took to his bed.