

Wife: I'm home.

Husband: Oh, honey, you are early.

You look happy. What's happened?

W: Glad you asked. Look at what I've bought.
A nice rain coat.

H: Really? Can I have a look at it?

W: Sure. You'll be surprised.

(She takes the raincoat out of the shopping bag)

W: Ta-dah! This is a brand-new rain coat.
Do you want me to try it on?

H: Yeah, if you want.

(She puts on the coat while humming a tune)

W: How do I look?

H: You look nice, but it looks expensive too.
How much was it?

W: You'll be surprised. It was just a 100 dollars.

H: What? Did I hear a hundred?

W: Yes you did. You exactly heard One Hundred Dollars, darling.

It's cheap, isn't it?

H: No, not at all. Who pays such a huge amount of money just for a rain coat?

W: But darling, it's not an ordinary rain coat.

It's a seal coat. You know, it's made of seal's skin.

H: Seal? The animal that lives in the sea?

W: Exactly. You know? A coat made from seal never lets rain come through.

H: How do you know that?

W: Well, have you ever seen a seal with an umbrella?

H: What? Whose idea is that?

W: The salesgirl at the shop said that to me.

H: That's ridiculous. There are no such a rain coat that seals rain 100%. Besides, people nowadays say that using animals for coats is a bad thing to do.

W: What a shame! So, do you want me to return it to the shop?

H: I'm afraid so. Don't worry, honey. When it rains, you can ride the exercise bike at home.
